Thirty years ago, photographer Gideon Mendel left a box of negatives and transparencies in storage in a friend's garage in Johannesburg. At some point the box was rained upon and the top layers damaged. The affected photographs were from Mendel's documentation of the final years of apartheid when he had witnessed the nationwide township uprising and scenes of mobilization, conflict and tragedy. This act of happenstance led to Mendel revisiting and re-engaging with his archives, and the gradual creation of this book Freedom or Death.

Photographer John Davies captures the landscape in a perpetual state of change. Retraced 81/19 brings together his early images alongside new contemporary works revisiting the same landscapes – mapping both equilibrium and change. These pairs of images, made from the same vantage point, tell of the alterations made by human activity and bear witness to cultural and social change over nearly four decades.

Dream Dance: The Art of Ed Emshwiler is a catalog released in conjunction with the artist's first major monographic exhibition at Lightbox Film Center and the Rosenwald-Wolf Gallery in Philadelphia. With an immensely diverse body of creative work in film, video, and visual art, Ed Emshwiler is perhaps one of the most significant yet under-recognized artists of the latter half of the 20th century. Emshwiler's career spanned abstract expressionist painting, commercial illustration, film, video and computer art, and collaborations with dancers, choreographers, and composers.

Photographer Jonathan Higbee spent years painstakingly documenting fleeting juxtapositions on the streets of New York. These intersections of passers-by, street signs, billboards, and more take on new meaning and life through the lens of Higbee's camera. Each photograph captures the wit, joy, and surrealism of everyday life in a sometimes chaotic world. Featuring new photographs, as well as seminal photos from his initial series, Coincidences is Higbee's self-professed love letter to New York and its moments of serendipity.
