Salal (Lemon Leaf)

- 1 Make the main stem using piece M (refer to basic techniques).
- 2 Make two additional stems using pieces N and L. Glue one of these into the end of the main stem to create one long, central stem.
- 3 Varnish all the leaf pieces and gently roll the edges to reflect her naturally waxy.
- 4 Glue and insert piece A into the end of the central stem.
- 5 Add leaves B-C down the stem, spaced about 20mm (2cm) apart and alternating sides. To attach into its original slot into the stem (like cars not to cut all the way through). Fold the base of the leaf to a point, apply glue to both sides, and insert into the slot.
- 6 Repeat with the other stems and leaf pieces P-Q. Flatten the end of this stem and glue it to the central stem at the join.
- 7 Gently flex the stems apart to form a full, natural looking spray.

Quince Blossom

- 1 Make the main branch using piece R (refer to basic techniques).
- 2 Make four smaller branches using pieces M-E. These should be slightly thicker - bend more lightly after removing the dowel if needed.
- 3 Flatten the ends and glue to the main branch, 50cm apart - these about five blossom branches far out.
- 4 To make flowers, cut piece A along the quills line to separate the petals. Press the rounded end of a pencil or garden fork into each petal to shape it, then overlap the petals, closing them up to form a flower.
- 5 Strip along edge of piece F to create a fringe. Pinch each strand, fan out the tips, then roll up and glue into the flower.
- 6 Cut piece B and glue the flower inside. Repeat to make eight flowers.
- 7 For buds, place piece C in your palm and press into the centre with the rounded end of a pencil or garden fork. Push each petal to a point and square up into a bud.
- 8 Deeply cup piece B, hold the bud tip closed, and glue inside. Make six buds.
- 9 Glue all the buds down the central stem, each B piece to half and glue one into the top of each branch.
- 10 Attach the flowers, buds and remaining leaves B-E to the branches. Group some together and space others out, reflecting how blossom naturally grows. To finish, bend the branches out in different directions for a sculptural effect.

Repeat to make a second Quince Blossom.

Displaying Flowers

Create a hand-tied bouquet by layering the finished stems in your hand, then crossing them as you go, and securing with rustic fabric and pretty pastel ribbon. Positioning the stems to different heights adds depth and dimension, with shorter flowers at the front and taller stems at the back. Gently bend the stems to shape the bouquet - try making the dowels or draping the fabric slightly to create natural charm.

Helpful Kit

The spring bouquet has been designed to be accessible to everyone, from complete beginner, to seasoned paper crafter. No need to invest in specialist tools - all you need are a few simple items, most of which you probably already have at home. Gather this basic kit together before you start, so you have everything at hand, ready to bring your paper flowers to life.

This dowel
A long, thin (20cm) diameter dowel is vital, alternatively use a thin wooden skewer (20cm x 6mm or similar).

Small spoon
A measuring spoon is ideal due to its narrow shape, but a regular teaspoon will also work.

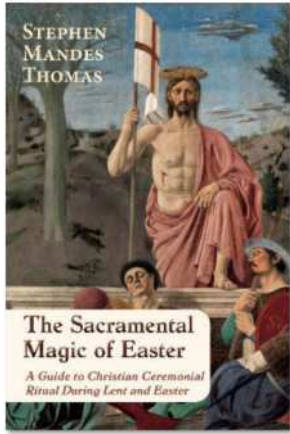

Frame mat (optional)
Anything on the floor can be made using just the palm of your hand. Alternatively, you can use a soft frame mat for shaping petals. Specialist mats are available, but you can also use foam packaging in a folded towel/tea-towel.

Scissors
Small, sharp scissors for snipping details.

Tweezers (optional)
Regular household tweezers are useful for holding small pieces (and keeping your fingers away from hot glue), also for pinching details onto leaves and petals.

Glue stick
A glue stick is great for making stems - while stronger ones are particularly useful.

Hot glue gun and glue sticks
Glue guns are ideal because the bond sets quickly while working. Alternatively use sewing clear glue suitable for card or paper, and avoid some drying time between stages.
